The Academy is where psychodynamic psychiatrists and physician psychoanalysts: discover a forum for exchange of ideas; find a voice within the American Psychiatric Association (APA) to advocate for psychodynamic understanding in the evaluation and treatment of patients; take a leadership role in promoting the importance of psychodynamic training in residency and medical education.

The American Academy of Psychodynamic Psychiatry and Psychoanalysis (AAPDPP) is an affiliate organization of the World Psychiatric Association (WPA) and the American Psychiatric Association (APA).

Message from the Program Co-Chairs: With this Annual Meeting Program our aim is to bring psychodynamic psychiatrists together to discuss the clinical challenges encountered when attending to patients with chronic pain and complex co-morbid medical conditions that cause psychological distress and affect quality of life. As complex multimorbidities often are best approached through collaborative models of care, we will present examples of successful therapeutic interventions when caring for patients who experience chronic pain and distress.

Patients seek help and healing when they experience pain and suffering. As physicians we are tasked with assessing, treating, and alleviating symptoms, and yet the predominantly medical model we work within often focuses solely on biophysiological drivers and solutions. However, many will feel only partially attended by this approach, and refractory pain and distress often persist when inadequately addressed by the biomedical model. We are faced with a strained, ineffective, costly, and at times dangerous medical system, resulting in isolation, alienation and disability. Providers are also suffering from burnout and disillusionment while practicing rigidly and defensively. When a dissatisfied, afraid, fixated, or overwhelmed patient with persistent symptoms is in our care, we must explore deeper psychodynamic forces causing, fueling, or maintaining pain and distress. And when strained physicians, colleagues, and trainees are distressed by our care options, we similarly must consider dynamic approaches and creative solutions.

The questions generated by these dilemmas are many: What is a given patient's core or underlying pain? Does physical pain (or any other "medical" symptom) often or always represent more? What intolerable experience is informing the preferable yet painful current presentation? And how do these surface manifestations change over the lifespan? Beyond physical pain, what is there to be done about the pain of loss, shame, rejection, isolation, disability, and helplessness? And what function does distress serve? In such distress, what is being communicated, in what manner, in what context, and for what reasons? We may argue that the human experience - behaviorally, attitudinally, cognitively, emotionally - all stems as a tangled reaction and consequence to primordial pains as well as accompanying distress. Cultural idioms of distress vary widely and must be understood in a sensitive and sensible way. Interoceptive awareness modulates the perception of nociceptive and neuropathic stimuli, and mentalization and the dynamics of self-other boundaries are important to understand experiences of pain and distress.

This year we examine the role of psychodynamic psychiatry in elucidating and alleviating the many protean presentations of both pain and distress, not only in our patients but also in ourselves as healers. Psychodynamic psychiatrists may be equipped to lead collaborative care models and liaise with other physician specialists to properly care for patients with complex multimorbidities.

Program: Our program will explore how psychodynamic psychiatry can be helpful with pain and distress of many types and presentations. We will discuss psychodynamic drivers of chronic unrelenting pain or other medical/physical symptoms, latent forces behind psychological distress, defenses and coping behaviors related to pain and distress, personality organization and how it informs pain and distress, transference and countertransference reactions emerging from work with pain and distress, and implications for training and supervision. We will also have presentations describing collaborative models of mental health care that are psychodynamically informed and could be practically implemented to better serve patients with complex multimorbidities, chronic pain and distress.

Our opening night speakers will include introductory remarks by Joanna Chambers, AAPDP chair of scientific programs, and Jennifer Downey, AAPDP president, who will describe the strategic position of psychodynamic psychiatrists in the care of patients with complex multimorbidities; Helen Herrman, president of the World Psychiatric Association, who will describe how psychiatrists can catalyze change in global mental health; and Altha Stewart, president-elect of the APA, who will speak about the impact of childhood trauma on global mental health. The program will include over 90 speakers from the USA and 12 other countries in a rich academic exchange of clinically relevant presentations in the form of interactive workshops, paper sessions, and symposia. These will include two panels from the Consultation and Liaison Service at Columbia University on biopsychosocially integrated care, developmental neuropsychodynamic research and treatment of somatic symptom disorders. From the Cleveland Clinic we have presenters addressing the psychodynamics of chronic pain in relationship to trauma, from object relations and attachment theory perspectives, including group therapy dynamics. International speakers from Europe, South America, and Asia, from the World Psychiatric Association and the World Association of Dynamic Psychiatry, will present on the place of psychodynamics in psychiatry in institutional and transcultural contexts when caring for patients with complex illnesses. There will be workshops and panels addressing management of countertransference and specific sessions on the care of children and adolescents, families, and collaborative care models for patients with substance use disorders, mood disorders, chronic pain and somatic symptom disorders. Workshops on psychodynamics and psychopharmacology, legal challenges to ethical care, trauma focused hypnosis, applied psychoanalysis, the care of patients with delirium, and psychotherapy with persons with Crohn's Disease will give participants opportunity for small group discussions.

There will be an open forum and Q&A Session with twelve AAPDP Past Presidents who will share historical perspectives and expert opinions about the evolution and essential areas of psychodynamic psychiatry. Other notable speakers will include Mary Ann Cohen, who will deliver a plenary address on creating health care environments for patients, physicians and their communities, and Mark Sullivan, the Keynote Speaker, who will address "Between suffering and survival: understanding the dynamic links among physical pain, social pain and addiction". Our President Jennifer Downey will deliver a lecture: "A Tale of Two Societies, the Academy and the College: What Next?"

The American Academy of Psychodynamic Psychiatry and Psychoanalysis is an affiliate organization of the American Psychiatric Association and World Psychiatric Association.

Conference Learning Objectives: This meeting has been designed to meet the following professional practice gaps and the needs derived from those gaps:

Gap #1:

Improving treatment of patients by:

- A. Attaining sufficient knowledge of psychodynamic principles and the ability to apply this knowledge.
- B. Enhancing the ability to integrate dynamic principles, psychopharmacology, and neuroscience in clinical practice.

Needs derived from the gaps above:

- A. To learn about development of therapeutic alliances; transference and countertransference; the handling of challenging situations; and practical applications of psychoanalytic theories.
- B. To learn about complex pathologies, neuroscientific advances, pharmacological treatments, and medical conditions and their implications/ramifications for psychodynamic psychotherapy.

Gap #2:

Enhancing training of residents and early career psychiatrists.

Needs derived from this gap:

- A. To learn new ways of engaging residents and training them in the complex theories and techniques of psychodynamic psychotherapy.
- B. To foster learning of complex theories and techniques of psychodynamic psychotherapy by early career psychiatrists.

All presentations must address at least one of the specified needs.

The Academy expects the results of its CME program to be an improvement in competence or performance. Definitions: "Competence" refers to knowing how to do something; and "Performance" is what a psychiatrist would do in practice if given the opportunity.

Target Audience: Those interested in the recent developments and clinical application of psychodynamic approaches: a) psychoanalysts, psychiatrists, child and adolescent psychiatrists, other physicians, residents, fellows and medical students; b) psychologists, interns and students of psychology; c) social workers, students of social work; d) allied professionals and students.

The American Academy of Psychodynamic Psychiatry and Psychoanalysis is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The American Academy of Psychodynamic Psychiatry and Psychoanalysis designates this live activity for a maximum of 24.0 AMA PRA Category 1 Credits™. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

The American Academy of Psychodynamic Psychiatry and Psychoanalysis acknowledges the generous support of the Alexandra and Martin Symonds Foundation to its educational programs.
