As we go into our first post-pandemic virtual meeting we have wondered at how we stay connected if we're not in person - with each other, to the external world through the work that we do, to our next generation of psychodynamic psychiatrists and even to parts of ourselves, as we constantly reconcile our medical roots, and our psychoanalytic ways of seeing and understanding. More than ever, how we hold ourselves as psychodynamic psychiatrists can impact not just the dyads we experience in the consulting room, but larger groups. Families, students, marginalized populations and even leaders of nations have benefitted from a psychodynamic lens, just as we have benefitted from the reciprocal experience of such engagement.

Adversity breeds resilience when we can connect. Growing the community within which we learn and find support has been the bedrock of how the Academy has been able to survive and will continue to flourish as we incorporate new digital media content and more innovative programs in mentorship and teaching. Please join us for the 68th Annual Meeting of the American Academy of Psychodynamic Psychiatry and

Psychoanalysis to continue finding ways for psychodynamics to flourish, to meet the minds of others wherever they might be.
